TON SUR TON

The power of nuance

The design trend of juxtaposing shades of a single colour to create a harmonious whole is making a comeback. By limiting the colour palette, textures and materials take centre stage, adding depth and dynamism to interiors expressed through the ton sur ton aesthetic. In this way, even with a uniform colour scheme, the interior acquires subtle nuances and a distinctive character.

A PLAY OF TEXTURES, MATERIALS AND FORMS

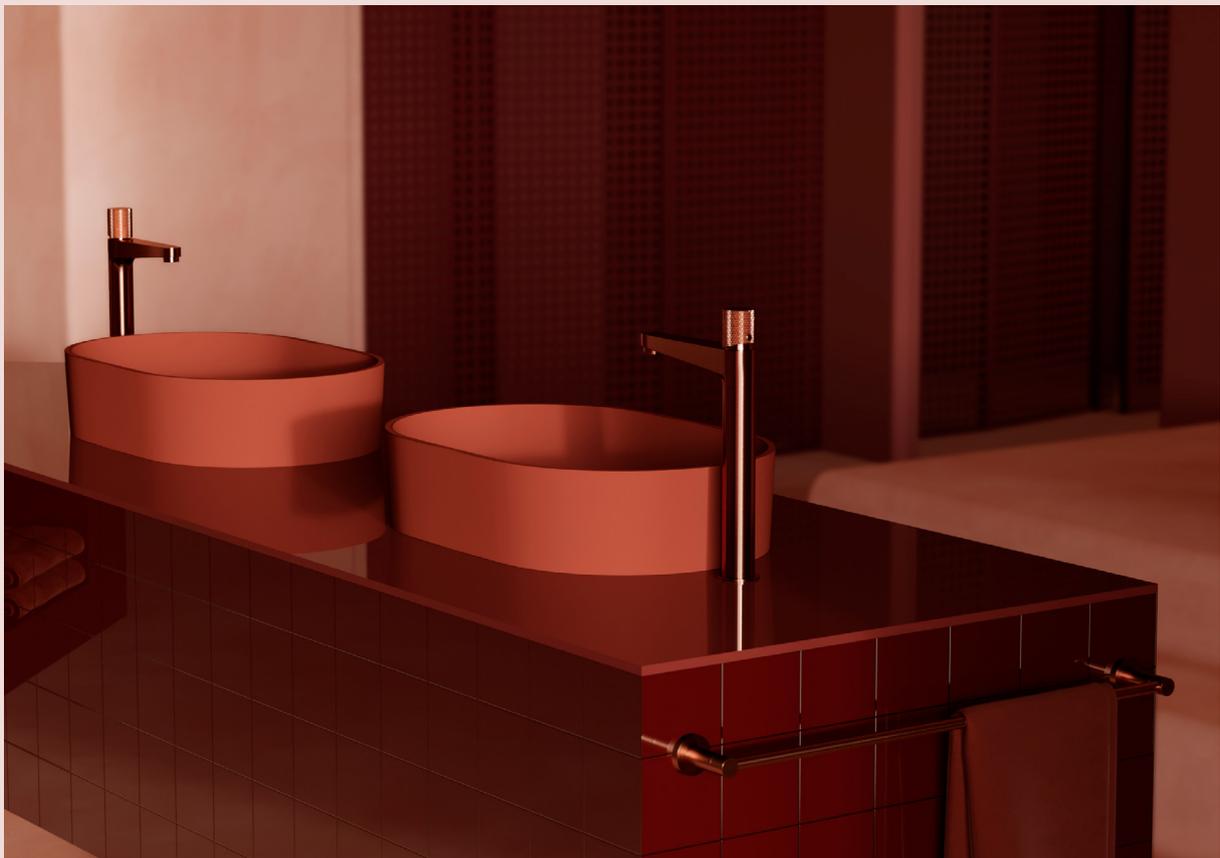

Using a monochromatic palette is the essence of elegance and subtlety in interior design. The French term ton sur ton, meaning “tone on tone” or “shade on shade”, describes a concept found across fashion, architecture, and visual design. It focuses on combining elements that differ only in intensity within a single colour family.

Ton sur ton provides more than harmony and visual calm. It allows you to fully immerse yourself in your favourite colour, while offering nearly limitless potential to experiment with textures, materials, and accents.

HOW TO CREATE AN INTERESTING ARRANGEMENT USING A SINGLE COLOUR?

The key to a successful ton sur ton interior lies in the intentional selection of colour. The base tone should reflect personal taste while aligning with the mood desired for the room. The next step is to creatively layer shades to introduce depth and emphasise the spatial qualities of the interior. Ton sur ton is, above all, the art of composition. While a monochrome palette might suggest that colour is the primary element, other factors become equally important. Materials are just as crucial as colour itself. The foundation of this subtle interplay lies in using diverse textures and contrasting matt and polished surfaces. Lighting further enhances the effect, accentuating nuances in the finishes, creating a multi-dimensional, sophisticated interior, and highlighting the beauty of the materials used.

IS IT WORTH OPTING FOR A MONOCHROME INTERIOR?

The ton sur ton trend owes its popularity to its versatility and timelessness. Interiors designed in this aesthetic gracefully withstand passing trends, maintaining style and elegance for years. But is creating a space in a single colour tone too restrictive – a challenge for those without interior design experience, or even for professionals?

"Quite the opposite. This versatile interior design style provides endless opportunities for creativity, allowing us to craft spaces that exude both contemporary elegance and classic grandeur—defined entirely by the details we select. Moreover, ton sur ton ensures harmony and cohesion, infusing any interior with a refined, sophisticated aesthetic." – comments Monika Rogusz-Witkoś, architect from the Craft of Interior studio.

WELL-CONSIDERED DETAILS IN PRACTICE

In a design by Wrocław-based studio Craft of Interior, warm, earthy tones of terracotta with a reddish-brown hue take centre stage. These soothing shades extend across both the walls and bathroom fittings, creating a harmonious ambiance. A variety of textures—smooth, glossy, raw, slightly grainy, or velvety matt—add layers of depth and dimension, ensuring a seamless yet dynamic interior. Minimalist forms and modern lines further emphasise the interior's elegance and refinement, while soft, subtle lighting introduces a sense of warmth and intimacy.

Success in this demanding style relies on harmoniously matching all fixtures within a single colour tone – a challenging task, particularly in a bathroom. This is where the Polish brand OMNIREs and its award-winning OVO M+ collection of baths and basins comes in. In addition to classic white, the line offers six other sophisticated shades – terracotta, coral, olive, midnight blue, ash grey and black lava – all featuring a luxurious matt finish.
